XXXVIIITH CONGRESS. First Session.

SENATE ... WASHINGTON, May 12, 1864. REGULATING RAILEGAD MONOPOLIES.

Mr. Wilson, from the Military Committee, reported the following, without amendment:

Racras, The Constitution of the United States confers spon Congress, in express forms, the power to regulate commerce among the serveral States, to establish-post roads, and to metre among the several states, to extend the post of the case and support armines therefore. Resolved. That every railroad in the United States, whose road is operated by steam, its successors and assigns, he and as hereby authorized to carry upon and ever its roads, conperious, boats, bridge, and ferries, all freight, property, mails, passengers, troops, and Government supplies on their way from one State to any other, and to receive compensation

INFORMATION AS TO GENERAL OFFICERS.

On motion of Mr. Wilson, it was resolved that the Secretary of War be directed to furnish the Senate with a list of all general others of the regular or volunteer forces in commission at the beginning of the present war or appointed after, with the States in which they were horn and from which they were appointed, designating those also whose nominations have been withdrawn from the Senate, those which have expired by Constitutional limitation, not having been confirmed by the Senate, those declinel, resigned, dropped, discharged, dismissed or mustered out of service, and those who have died in the service.

a clause as this, as a qualification in this bill, would be a start in the right direction.

Mr. Cowan showed that many of the States had statutes against neare suffrage, and it would be dangerous to attempt it here at this time.

Mr. Lank (Kansas) would vote for the proposition without the property qualification, as he considered that giving the suffrage to the property, and not to the man. He would, after three years, in which the negroes could carn our institutions, bestow free suffrage upon them.

Mr. Whiley argued against the proposition, on the ground that the right to vote was purely conventional, and that it rested solely with communities to bestow the privileges of the franchise. He said the inhabitants of Washington were opposed to this measure nearly manimously. He depicted the evils which would flow from bestowing the high privilege upon the masses of uneducated slaves, especially in Washington, where the population, according to the present ratio of increase, would in five years be one half colored. The passage of the measure would not only be injurious to crease, would in five years be one half colored. The passage of the measure would not only be injurious to the colored race itself, but would irrivate the whole country, and especially the Border States. He said this as one who had emancipated slaves by the sweat of his own brow. It was idle to suppose that we could confer the high privileges of civilization by a scratch of the pen or by acts of Congress upon a degraded and integrant race. Mr. Sumnen said Slavery died hard, both in this mbor and on the battle-field. We have been com-ied before to listen to a vindication of the slave code; it he slave-hunter on this floor, and to-day the excha-n of colored persons from the franchise has been ad-ated by the Senator from West Virginia, who was self introduced into this chamber by the influence of sedom. He rises here to-day to vindicate Slavery one of its meanest productions.

inself introduced into this chamber by the influence of Freedom. He rises here to-day to vindicate Slavery on one of its meanest productions.

Mr. Willey denied that he had defended Slavery. When the Senator had liberated as many slaves as he had, he could afford to eall him a friend of the slave, and not before. When the Senator gets his other bill through, to allow negroes to testify in courts of justice, he could bring a half dezen witnesses to testify that he was a better friend of Freedom and Emancipation than the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. SUMNER said the gentleman had the odious prejudice arising out of his former connection with Slavery still in him. The head of the beast had been out off, but the Senator still clung to the tail.

Mr. Cowax denied the right of the Senator from Massachusetts to denounce those who denied suffrage to negroes as advocating Slavery. The assumption was idle, and only betokened ignorance and weakness. What an idea it was that West Virginia should put herself at the will of the Senator in order to be in the line of promotion. He thought the Senator should have been called to order for his remarks. He was certainly out of order among gentlemen.

Mr. Cowax proceeded at length to argue against the give homesteads to sailors and soldiers, without regard to color, on forfeited or confiscated lands in insurrectionary districts.

Mr. JULIAN (Un., Ind.), in replying to Fernando Wood's remarks of yesterday, denied that this bill would retard the reconstruction of the Union. Robert Toombs, Robert W. Johnson, Jacob Thompson and other prominent Rebels who were fast friends of old Jimmy Buchanan hold millions of seres of lands, purchased at low rates, but now valuable. If these lands were divided among these who perit their lives for their country what evil would result?

Mr. Kalbrutsch (Dem., N. Y.) wished to know if the gentleman meant James, Euchanan, the former President of the United States?

Mr. JULIAN thought the gentleman could guess at his meaning; he had spoken familiarly of old Jimmy Buchanan. If the gentleman from New-York (Wood) means the restoration of the Union as it was when the Government, and the slaveholder's whip was held over those who opposed Slavery, and when the Government was steadily groveling under the weight of treason, drifting into civil war, he (Julian) was not in favor of the Union as it was word in favor of the Union as it was steed the Government. And the slaveholder's whip was held over those who opposed Slavery, and when the Government was steadily groveling under the weight of treason, drifting into civil war, he (Julian) was not in favor of the Union as it was, but for a regenerated Union on the basis of free labor, ignoring Slavery as the cornerstone. Mr. Julian further replied, showing that the bill was not unconstitutional. In reply to Mr. Mallory, he said it was contemplated to give equal lights to negroes as to ownership of soil. As to the so-called equality, that must work out itself, he would not speculate as to the future on that subject.

Mr. Mallory (Dens., Ky.) inquired whether the

Mr. JULIAN replied that formerly negroes were entitled to vote in North Carolina and other Southern States, but the question of suffrage was left to the decision of the States themselves. As to social equality, those who saw fit to associate with negroes could do so. Southern men have no particular objection to this, as in that section amalgamation was practiced in its most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form, as was seen in the large number of mulative most disgusting form and mulative mo

Mr. JULIAN said that the House had passed a bill to forfeit the fee of the Rebels to the lands.

It is an erroneous idea that where discharges of the eer are checked, it will be thrown in the system, end will make its appearance semewhere else in a more aggravated form. A directly contrary effect I have always found in cases that I have treated, the health of the patient being much more robust after the discharge has been checked. I am yet to see a case where it has impaired the health of the patient by being stopped. Let my one disposed to think any injurious effects can arise from its being stopped ask themselves the question, "Is it matural for the ear to discharge?" No, certainly not. Then can it be being stopped ask themselves the question, "Is it matural for the ear to discharge?" No, certainly not. Then can it be beneficial to have an offensive discharge, rendering you disquating to every one with whom you are brought contact, countantly running from your ears, or can it be injurious to check it?
